

Post Naturalists

The highlands of Iceland have become a protected area and home to those who worry about their ecological footprint on the planet; they live together to serve nature in a self-sustainable commune where the ancient religion of Asatru is being practised; the people of this zone have developed a deep relationship with huldufolk and are able to communicate with them through mediums.

Objective: Conservre nature, while claiming protected areas and national parks.

Hard Politics: Natural Hazards // Environmental Reports

Soft Politics: Protest // Mythology & Folklore // Mediums

Weaknesses: Greed // Exploitation // Trolling

Post Humanists

As an evolution of Piratar, Zuism, IMMI, Your Priorities and Better Reykjavik, this zone of Iceland is characterized by transparency and is home to those who believe that freedom of information is above everything else; it's a safe haven for whistle-blowers, investigative reporters, hackers and internet trolls; and the overall mentality is equitable as for the abundance of e-democracy tools for socio-political engagement.

Objective: Fight for freedom of information, while erecting data centers.

Hard Politics: Cyber-attacks // E-Democracy

Soft Politics: Whistle-blowing // Trolling // Protest

Weaknesses: Natural Hazards // Censorship

Post Industrialists

After the Arctic has melted and new shipping routes have been established, a major harbour now symbolises the triumph of 'the corporate vikings'; this zone works in a capitalist way of accumulating wealth through greed, drafting secret trade agreements with foreign investors, exploiting natural resources for the production of energy and corrupting environmental / scientific reports to fit their own agendas.

Objective: Exploit natural resources for energy, while erecting factories and harbours.

Hard Politics: Corruption // Construction // Policy

Soft Politics: Media Control // Polls

Weaknesses: Transparency // Natural Hazards
